

UNIVERSITY of WASHINGTON

School of Forest Resources

October 7, 2009

To: Faculty, School of Forest Resources

From: Tom Hinckley, Interim Director

Re: Noted Achievements

There have been several significant changes and additions that have been noted in other venues, but I would like to make sure they receive more formal attention.

Professor Robert Edmonds was awarded on September 16th the Denman Professorship in Sustainable Resource Science. Bob's diversity, quality and longevity of administrative services to the former College as well as his current service to the School set an extraordinarily high bar. Perhaps more remarkable has been Bob's ability to maintain a teaching load with concomitant quality of instruction and research productivity of enviable standards. The awarding of this professorship recognizes these wonderful attributes.

Professors Sharon Doty and Clare Ryan are now Associate Professor with tenure and Professor, respectively. Again, two individuals who have carved distinguished records.

Finally, our newest faculty member, Professor Stanley Asah has arrived, has initiated instruction and already has funded research proposals. An auspicious beginning!

