

Denman Forestry Issues Series: Washington's Forest Regulations and Their Impacts on The Private Landowner

May 30, 2001

How Do Forest Regulations Affect You, The Private Landowner?

University of Washington College of Forest Resources continued its Denman Forestry Issues Series on May 30, 2001.

Alumni and faculty from the College of Forest Resources discussed the impacts of forest regulation on private landowners. Policy analysts and speakers representing the Washington Farm Forestry Assn., Washington Forest Protection Assn., and the Washington Department of Natural Resources took part.

The program was broadcast using satellite technology to 11 Washington State Cooperative Extension Learning Centers and County Extension offices across the state. There was no charge for the event.
